

An Introduction to the History and Social Studies of Science

John Andrew Schuster

BA (Columbia), MA (Cambridge), MA, PhD (Princeton)

Program in History & Philosophy of Science
School of History and Philosophy
University of New South Wales

Unit for History & Philosophy of Science
Faculty of Science
University of Sydney

© J.A.Schuster 1995
ISBN 0-86418-326-7

Contents

Chapter 1	Introduction: Four Commonly Accepted Tales about Science, Technology, Society and Progress	1
Chapter 2	The Standard Story of Scientific Method: Objectivity and Progress Based on Facts and Tests	25
Chapter 3	Beyond the Myth of Scientific Method: The Theory-Loading of Facts	44
Chapter 4	Different Theories—Different Facts: Oxygen vs. Phlogiston in the Eighteenth Century	59
Chapter 5	The Manufacture of Scientific Knowledge: Was Oxygen Discovered or Constructed?	70
Chapter 6	Why Experimental Tests are Never Definitive: The Politics of Testing	87
Chapter 7	Sir Karl Popper’s Attempt to Save the Story of Scientific Method	100
Chapter 8	How Science Develops Without a Method: T.S.Kuhn’s Theory of the History of Science	115
Chapter 9	Making ‘Big’ Modern Science: The Politics of Testing and Negotiation of Discovery—The Strange Case of Solar Neutrinos	140
Chapter 10	Understanding the History and Social Aspects of Science: Rethinking Discovery and ‘Progress’	153